Common Adjectives for Body Shape and Size

Adjectives to describe physical appearance often begin with the fundamental aspect of body shape and size. These descriptors help convey an individual's silhouette, stature, and build. Using accurate adjectives in this category provides a clear mental picture of a person's physique.

Body Shape Descriptors

Body shape adjectives focus on the general form and proportions of an individual. Typical terms include:

- Slender – Thin and graceful, often implying elegance.
- Stocky – Broad and solidly built, often shorter in stature.
- Athletic – Muscular and fit, showing physical strength and fitness.
- Curvy – Having well-defined curves, typically used for a fuller figure.

- Lean – Thin with little body fat, conveying a toned appearance.

Size and Stature Adjectives

Describing size and height further refines the physical portrayal. Common adjectives include:

- Tall – Having greater than average height.
- Short – Below average height.
- Petite – Small and delicate, often referring to women.
- Bulky – Large and heavy in build, sometimes implying muscular development.
- Average – Neither notably tall nor short, medium build.

Describing Facial Features with Adjectives

Facial features are vital in physical descriptions, as they often define individuality and expression. Adjectives relating to facial structure, eyes, nose, lips, and other features enrich the depiction of a person's appearance.

Facial Structure Adjectives

These terms describe the overall shape and contours of the face:
