Types of Conjunctions Covered in Worksheets

Coordinating Conjunctions

Coordinating conjunctions join words, phrases, or independent clauses of equal importance. The common coordinating conjunctions include: for, and, nor, but, or, yet, and so. Worksheets focusing on coordinating conjunctions often involve exercises that require students to combine sentences or clauses logically using these connectors.

Worksheets targeting subordinating conjunctions help learners understand complex sentence structures and improve their ability to express complex ideas.

Correlative Conjunctions

Correlative conjunctions function in pairs to link equivalent sentence elements, such as both/and, either/or, neither/nor, and not only/but also. Exercises on correlative conjunctions focus on recognizing paired connectors and using them correctly to maintain sentence balance and clarity.
